Library Services to People Who Are Incarcerated:

- Encourages a life-long relationship with the library, so that individuals & families may benefit from library services & programs throughout their lives after incarceration
- Promotes reentry success
- Eases the stress of incarceration
- Creates a positive relationship with the community
- Provides services to those who may not otherwise have access

Nearly 50% of all adults in the US have an immediate family member that has been incarcerated in jail or prison for at least one night, this percentage is higher for Black and Latinx adults (Enns et al., 2019)

Library Services

"I really appreciate your help with these book requests, it makes my time in jail much more manageable..."

"... thank you for the service you are providing in here it really helps my mental health and depression when I have books to read"

People & Stories

"This story made me feel appreciation for strong, meaningful words. I really loved the way she made a living for herself. I can only think how much self-worth or self-esteem that her honest words gave her"

"This was a great piece... The writing style is very complex and often required re-reading sections, as you would do with a poem. But I really enjoyed the challenge of this... I'm saving this one to read again"

CCF: People & Stories

- Introduces marginalized populations to relevant literature

CCF: Why we do this work

Statement of Purpose

As a public library, it is our responsibility to provide library services to all. By actively engaging with and equitably serving people impacted by incarceration, library programs and services benefit not only those inside the jails, it also serves the community as a whole. The CCF Team provides access to information, education, and relevant resources through library programs and services to youth and adults incarcerated in Santa Cruz County and the cities within the county. We provide library account registration, library book lending, and People & Stories, a short story discussion group that brings relevant literature to those who may not otherwise have access.
